OVERVIEW

REDEFINING LUXURY THROUGH EVERYDAY CONSUMPTION

OPPORTUNITY ASSESSMENT

CURRENT STATE OF MOSCHINO

Moschino has built a distinct identity through satirical, maximalist fashion, using bold visual language and pop culture references to challenge traditional luxury (Wang 2020).

From its origin, the brand has critiqued the fashion industry with irony and humor, evolving into a house known for camp and expressive design.

This brand positioning has established Moschino as a culturally disruptive brand with a strong recognizable DNA (Gonzalez 2023).

BRAND IDENTITY

THROUGH THE AGES

FRANCO MOSCHINO

(1980s-1994)

- Founded satire and anti-fashion.
- Critiqued luxury through irony and humor.
- Reimagined everyday symbols as fashion statements.

JEREMY SCOTT

(2013-2023)

- Pop culture meets high fashion.
- Everyday brands reimagined as luxury: e.g. Barbie, SpongeBob, McDonalds.
- Maximalist humor and mass culture.

THE CURRENT ERA

(Post 2023)

- Shift towards refinement and repositioning.
- There's a reduced cultural impact.
- Opportunity to redefine relevance.

APPLE BAG

SPECIFIC EXAMPLES OF CURRENT ACTIVATIONS

- Apple bag at $1500+
- Coats with garish prints also upholding a luxury price tag.
- Expansion into fragrance for accessible barrier-to-entry items – main revenue generator.

WHERE IS THE CULTURAL RELEVANCE?

- Despite the brand's strong identity, Moschino has experienced declining sales and reduced cultural relevance in recent years (Shoaib, 2024).
- Whilst the garish designs prompt visual excitement, the brand is often perceived as occasion-wear rather than everyday fashion, limiting purchase frequency.
- Combine this with the high luxury price points and low practicality, the brand is less accessible to modern consumers.

This creates a disconnect between Moschino's bold identity and its role in consumers' everyday lives.

CURRENT CHALLENGES

MARKET CONTEXT

shifts towards experiential retail

THE FUTURE OF LUXURY IS CHANGING

- Minimalism in luxury is the norm - lacking differentiation ((Althuizen and Klucarova, 2026).
- Consumer expectations are shifting with physical retail requiring more experimentation in immersive experiences (D'Auria, 2025).
- With growth in digital discovery of products, stores must offer an added reason to visit and engage in person.

MOSCHINO CAFE POP-UP: They are adopting experiential retail, but there is much scope to push the individuality of the concepts further.

CONSUMER INSIGHTS

Gen Z behaviour

- Gen Z is rapidly increasing purchasing power - highly engaged in the fashion sector (Avidor, 2025).
- Preference for smaller, more frequent purchases rather than infrequent high-cost spending (Morning Consult, 2025).
- They are driven by emotional connection, cultural relevance, and identity-based consumption.

Cultural Shifts - a movement towards food and beverages

- Food and lifestyle culture has become a key part of identity for Gen Z and young Millennials (Farahiyah, Oceanie, and Janah, 2025).
- Cafés, snacks, and everyday indulgences are no longer purely functional, but act as social and cultural experiences (Bramley, 2025).
- Competitors: Coach, Ralph Lauren have approached this concept.

SURVEY INSIGHTS

convenience stores

- 43.8% of respondents said they visit convenience stores multiple times a week; 12.5% of respondents said they visited corner stores daily.
- Typical purchases cited from respondents were snacks, drinks and grab and go items.

THE WHITE SPACE

Moschino is in the business of cultural disruption.

- White space for a luxury brand to bridge the gap between high-cost, low-frequency consumption in a creative and non-generic retail experience.

MARKETING OBJECTIVES

MOSCHINO MARKET: turning everyday consumption into cultural spectacle

- Generate strong brand identity awareness by creating an engaging and immersive pop-up retail activation which reflects Moschino's playful aesthetic.
- Drive foot traffic within the pop-up space to create social and organic B2C engagement.
- Create a sustained social buzz surrounding the brand by soft-launching food and beverages, with an aim to gain cultural relevance amongst younger audiences.
- Position Moschino as a power house brand with a multi-category portfolio; embedding the lifestyle pillar into their product discovery.
- Innovate and reintroduce creative touchpoint exploration in luxury, disrupting the competitive market.

BRAND PERCEPTUAL MAP

BRAND POSITIONING MAP

Luxury x Pop Culture x Irony

Moschino sits under high maximalist style, and high popular culture references.

- The new positioning reaffirms that status.
- From typical fashion house to cultural disruptor.

Competitors:

- Marc Jacobs: Playful and Creative
- Balenciaga: Cultural and Conceptual
- Chanel: Traditional and Minimal

MOSCHINO - Owners of the camp and ironic commentary.

STUNT MARKETING

“I got this from a corner store” ... “I got this from Moschino”

Exploring stunt marketing techniques to:

- Reframe luxury through irony and accessibility.
- Blurs the lines between necessity and indulgence.
- Designed for virality, confusion and conversation (aligns with the Gen Z target audience).

CAMPAIGN PHASES

Creating change in a way that feels current but can evolve into long-lasting fashion concepts.

Tease the Disruption

Launch the Pop-Up

Sustain Obsession

Extend the Narrative

“I Got this from Moschino” tagline

Phase 1

- Corner store imagery appears in NYC on in-person touch points (billboards, signage)
- Everyday food items made a moment of on the Moschino IG. No confirmation of concept yet.

Phase 2

- Select influencers receive curated grocery-style packages (these items are not the final one's sold in store) – purposefully made vague to stir up conversation. “with love from Moschino”.
- Packaging hints at food and fashion crossover.

Phase 3

- Tiktok and IG content drives organic theories.

PRE-LAUNCH (WEEKS 1-4)

CONFUSION PHASE

confusion → curiosity → desire

- Intentionally withholding initial clarity to build demand.
- The audience becomes part of the decoding process of the campaign.
- Feels like a rumor not a launch.

LAUNCH + ACTIVATION

Product becomes storytelling...

The pop-up corner store emphasizes the Moschino world.

LAUNCH STRATEGY: (WEEK 5)

- Invite-only preview for press, influencers, and cultural tastemakers
- First access to “staff only” store zone (featuring Moschino’s food-fashion archive.
- Immediate public opening in NYC for a 1 month stint.
- Daily restocks of shelving, food, and merchandise.

KEY ACTIVATION MOMENTS: (WEEK 6-12)

- Products, receipts and packaging become shareable mentos
- A mirrored panel behind the fresh food section encourages photography with Moschino decals on to promote content capturing.
- All shopping bags say “I GOT THIS FROM A CORNER STORE”.
- Free Moschino gummy bears with every visit.

MARKETING DRIVERS

cultural behavior, not traditional advertising

- SCARCITY
 - Time sensitive food and product availability
 - No guaranteed repeat inventory post pop-up.
- SHAREABILITY
 - Every interaction is designed for content creation
 - The immersive in-store feel
- DISCOVERY
 - Hidden archival room
 - Unexpected product placement
 - Constant sense of exploration

POST LAUNCH PHASE

Build a strong base for consistent food industry growth, and potential for a food fashion collection leading on from this buzz.

- Digital recaps and campaign film and archived content release.
- Launching limited online drops of some items via the website post-launch.
- Insights gathered from consumer behavior will inform future category expansion into food and lifestyle.

KEY PERFORMANCE INDICATORS

Measuring success across traffic, sales and cultural impact.

Performance = sales + cultural relevance + repeat behaviour

CONCLUSION

- Declining Relevance: Occasion-wear positioning limits frequency and weakens Gen Z engagement
- Market Opportunity: A saturated, minimal luxury space creates room for disruption
- Answering the How Might We...Moschino Market transforms the brand by:
 - Lowering price barriers
 - Embedding into everyday life
 - Creating playful, shareable experiences

*Final Positioning:
From occasional luxury to everyday,
culturally relevant Moschino*
